The dove was sent down from on high, resounding loudly.

Resembling lightning, the Spirit armed the apostles with fireproof flames while they were seated in the Upper Room.

The Dove, ethereal, unfathomable, Who fathoms the depths of God, has received it from the Father and tells of the awesome second coming. The apostles proclaimed the Spirit consubstantial with the Father.
Oριμ - ḫhîn - h, ṭrû - ñÎhûn,

Blessing in the highest to the Holy Spirit who comes forth from the Father, through whom the apostles drank from the immortal cup, and invited this Earth into heaven.